

To Whom it may concern:

I have been a fan of Southern Gospel music since I was a child 50 years ago. I admired groups such as the Statesmen, the Blackwood Brothers, the Cathedral Quartet and family groups such as the Happy Goodman's, the Rambo's, the Hinson's and others. The decades of experience shared in the Helmsmen Quartet of Ohio and a smooth, traditional sound combines to bring back memories of the great groups of years past. In a time when quartet music is being replaced with current trends, the Helmsmen Qt. have stayed true to the sound reminiscent of the aforementioned four part male groups. If you are a fan of the music that made traditional quartet music what it is, you owe it to yourself to hear these gentlemen. Let their sweet sounds take you on a ride through Gospel music history. Check them out on YouTube and see for yourself.

Sincerely,
John Darin Rowsey
